Celebrating 36 Years of Excellent Service

Our company was created to fill a gap within the transportation industry. Pioneering the Actual Cash Value and Full Replacement Value Coverage options, our programs allowed shippers to purchase coverage for their household goods against specific events previously excluded by the carrier’s regular liability coverage. Instead of basing coverage on weight, our programs are based on items’ values giving a much more accurate reflection of the shipment’s true worth.

SOME THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT YOUR TRANSIT INSURANCE PROVIDER

How Long Have They Been in Business? A transit insurance provider is measured by its length of life which indicates not only its financial strength but also its ability to service its customers well.

Which Insurance Company do they represent? Most insurance providers are brokers for insurance companies; they are not actual insurance companies themselves. Knowing which company they represent allows you to check their financial strength/rating.

Do they indicate their indemnity on their insurance policies? The indemnity should always be identified on the certificates of insurance. If not, it may be that the coverage being offered is not insurance at all.

WEIGH YOUR OPTIONS

After asking these questions, compare several providers’ coverage options. Certificates should be in plain English with clearly defined terms and conditions, including what is excluded, how to file a claim, whether depreciation is factored into claim settlement and if the shipper has to prepare a value list.

YOU GET WHAT YOU PAY FOR

Beware of insurance providers marketing coverage at extremely low rates. These providers can rarely produce quality service and comprehensive coverage. You should ask how they can afford to offer coverage at such low costs. One way, of course, is to restrict coverage. Obviously the more restricted the coverage the less expensive it is.
